1. DURBAN, South Africa (AP) – Two of soccer’s most prolific teams couldn’t find the net Friday at the World Cup.

Portugal reached the second round of the World Cup on Friday after a listless 0-0 draw with group winner Brazil. Brazil had already secured advancement and won Group G with seven points, two more than Portugal. Ivory Coast, which beat North Korea 3-0, was third with four points. The Koreans ended with zero.

Brazil coach Dunga blamed Portugal’s defensive setup for the lackluster result.

“We played to win, but our opponent didn’t”, Dunga said. “We always tried to attack, but they only tried to take advantage of our mistakes.”

2. The director James Cameron has announced plans to make another 3-D film about an indigenous tribe trying to preserve its land. Unlike his Oscar-winning “Avatar,” however, this film will be a documentary about the Xikrin-Kayapó tribe in Brazil and its attempts to stop the construction of the Belo Monte hydroelectric dam, which is to be built near tribal lands on the Xingu River, a tributary of the Amazon, Agence France-Presse reported.

3. BERLIN – President Barack Obama’s popularity remains high among Europeans, but there are growing doubts about his handling of some foreign policy issues, particularly Iran and Afghanistan, according to the annual Transatlantic Trends Survey published Wednesday.

Although there was a slight decline in Mr. Obama’s approval rating, down from 83 percent in 2009 to 78 percent this year, over half of the Europeans polled said they supported the United States’ exerting strong leadership in world affairs. This is in sharp contrast to the ratings of Mr. Obama’s predecessor, George W. Bush, who consistently received poor scores from Europeans.

4. Scientists said Thursday that a new AIDS vaccine, the first ever declared to protect a significant minority of humans against the disease, would be studied to answer two fundamental questions: why it worked in some people but not in others, and why those infected despite vaccination got no benefit at all.

The vaccine – known as RV 144, a combination of two genetically engineered vaccines, neither of which had worked before in humans – was declared a qualified success after a six-year clinical trial on more than 16,000 volunteers in Thailand. Those who were vaccinated became infected at a rate nearly one-third lower than the others, the sponsors said Thursday morning.

5. SAN FRANCISCO – Motorola introduced the first of a new generation of smartphones Thursday that it hopes will reverse its plummeting cellphone sales.

The phone, called the Cliq, is meant for young people obsessed with social networks. Instead of the traditional menu of features, the Cliq's home screen is an ever-changing mosaic of e-mail, Twitter tweets and status updates, superimposed over photos of the people sending those messages.

EXERCÍCIO 02

Brazil's far-right president Jair Bolsonaro has derided Greta Thunberg after the teenage climate activist added her voice to growing international condemnation of a surge of anti-indigenous violence in the Amazon.

"Indigenous people are literally being murdered for trying to protect the forrest [sic] from illegal deforestation. Over and over again," Thunberg tweeted on Sunday alongside a video showing the aftermath of a drive-by shooting targeting indigenous leaders that left two dead.

Bolsonaro – who activists accuse of green-lighting a new era of destruction and violence with his hardline anti-environment rhetoric – hit back on Tuesday. "It's amazing how much space the press gives this kind of pirralha," Bolsonaro added, using a Portuguese word that loosely translates as "little brat" or "pest". (...)

Thunberg is far from alone in challenging Bolsonaro over the spike in rainforest destruction and attacks on indigenous communities during his first year in power.

Brazil's Indigenous Missionary Council rights group reported in September that 153 indigenous territories had been invaded since the start of 2019 – more than twice last year's figure of 76 – and said Bolsonaro's "aggressive" talk was partly responsible.
